A MODERN PIONEER

The door of the C-47 slid back, revealing a uniformed figure in full combat pack. At a signal, the form plunged earthward, jerking suddenly as the folds of the parachute billowed white and puffy against the pale blue sky. Swaying gently, maneuvering the lines, the figure dropped unerringly into the painted circle, tumbled and came to rest, on target. "Nice jump, Helen," said the lieutenant.

Did he say, HELEN?

Sure, Helen Conway has always been a pioneer. Take the first time, back in the early 1930's. In those days commercial flying was new; no "Coffee, tea or milk" and certainly no hot meals served by pretty stewardesses. In fact, the planes would land only on passenger call or if they had to refuel. Lunch was literally a "pick-up" affair. The plane would cruise low over the airfield, drop a hook, and snag a bundle of box lunches. At least, that's how American Airlines did it at Preston Glen Airport, Lynchburg. And guess who packed those lunches? Right. And guess who got some free rides in those old "Tin Gooses" and "DC-2's?" Right again.

Of course, women in the air was not unusual; those were the days of Amelia Earhart, and the days of the "Powder Puff Derby," in which housewives used to tear around pylons and race cross country in Ryan's and Stinson's, usually open cockpit. But a woman JUMPING out of a plane; that was different.

Helen Conway joined up in 1944 and was sent to W.A.C. (Women's Army Corps) medical training center at Camp Gordon, Georgia. She learned the basics of battlefield medicine there, and when somebody got the idea that corpsmen should jump with the rest of the troopers, she volunteered, and became one of the first paramedics.

The most recent example of her pioneering is, of course, Frederick. Married during the war to Joseph Conway, she had settled down to be a wife and mother; but after her son Ronald was in school she decided simply running a house was a little too quiet.

Food service had been Mrs. Conway's principal interest even before her days with American Airlines. At E.C. Glass High School, in Lynchburg, she had majored in Home Economics; later she worked in the dining facilities at Randolph-Macon College for Women, and took courses in Nutrition and Dietetics at Virginia Polytechnic Institute. Mrs. Conway was working in the Norfolk County School Lunch system when she first heard of the new college that was going to open in Portsmouth. So, ever the pioneer, she was on the doorstep of the cafeteria the day they moved in the kitchen equipment; and that was only two days before the first registration.

Helen Conway no longer jumps out of of planes (although we understand that Washington is dickering with her about being the first American Woman Astronaut); her activities instead are reserved to the perhaps less exciting but more rewarding work of her church, Highland Baptist, where for several years she and her husband have been involved in youth work, notably Cub and Boy Scouting.

So, "Connie," eve nthough we complain once in awhile and sometimes have to run for cover when we get you angry, we still love you; and like so many of the "old boys," we'd like to come back for coffee once in awhile and kind of just reminisce.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

On September 3, 1963 Frederick Military Academy opened its doors for its third successful year of operation as a secondary school. We were proud of our two beginning years in spite of the many heartaches, frustrations and adjustments that were faced. We realized that all of these problems and others, just as trying, were necessarily a part of a new school.

Even as we faced the new year, 1963-64, we realized that we were still quite young when compared with most independent schools. We knew that similar problems of adjustment, frustrations and disappointments would meet us along the way. Without the support and cooperation of the cadet corps, the faculty and the staff we knew that our school would not prosper to its fullest potential.

Now as we stand at the end of the year looking back, we can say that our successes were largely due to the spirit, enthusiasm and hard work of the cadets. They proved to be the heart of the program; the majority of them prospered.

It is true that we lost some cadets along the way because of their inability to cope with the entire program and their unwillingness to abide by the regulations, but the vast majority of our cadets proved to be worthy of our faith and trust.

Surely many of the young men who have passed our way this year as graduates will be our leaders of tomorrow. Their pride in accomplishment, spiritual strength, sense of fair play and moral integrity will take them far. We all wish for them the very best in life. May they reap their just reward.

THE BEAZLEY FOUNDATION

It has been characteristic of Twentieth Century America that often the men who have grown wealthy by its favors have been guided to return portions of their gain for the public benefit. Men like Carnegie, Ford, Rockefeller — all have funded great trusts during their lifetimes; trusts dedicated to the endless search for knowledge, and to the service of all mankind.

Similarly ,at local levels, men who have prospered in their own communities have so often returned the favor; they have built libraries and hospitals, established scholarships, donated lands. On such a basis was the Beasley Foundation originated in 1948; a lasting and useful memorial to its benefactors, Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Beazley, and their late son, Fred, Jr., citizens of Portsmouth.

The Beazley family has donated more than four million dollars to the cause of Education in their community, specifically to Frederick College and Frederick Military Academy. The latter, administered by Foundation Boys' Academy, Inc., was established in 1958, and has been independent of the college since 1961. Lawrence W. I'Anson, a justice of the Supreme Court of Virginia, is Chairman of the Board of Trustees. Both the college and the academy are named in honor of Frederick T. Beazley, father of the principal founder.

MEMORANDUM FROM THE DAILY BULLETIN: "Seniors who have failed a final exam may take a re-test before graduation ceremonies."

Oh, the gates swing in
And the gates swing out
Freshmen pass in
And Senior pass out
But Daddy and Momma
I done spliced a comma
So here I am to stay

Oh, my buddies they went
My best wishes I sent
I'm a soldierly gent
But my brain is a vent
I get no diploma
I'm still in a coma
So here I am to stay

Oh, here it is June
College starts pretty soon
I feel like a loon
A despicable goon
I try, I'm a crammer
But I still can't pass grammar
So here I am to stay

Oh, I want to go home
To the Ocean's white foam
The beaches I'd roam
And I'd dance at the Dome
But its all wishful thinking
(The verb was not linking)
So here I am to stay

Oh, all hope has faded
My paper he's graded
On thin ice I've skated
My doom is post-dated
I know I have failed
My ship it has sailed
So here I am . . .

But wait, folks, let's see
HURRAY, MOM, I'm FREE!
I passed Senior English
WITH A BIG SEVENTY-THREE!

THE END

In any cycle there is a recognizable period of ascendency, of crest, of decline. If we view the high school cycle in terms of drive and ambition, it is the junior year in which the student arrives at his peak. To be sure, the senior reaps the rewards, and justly so. But for the senior, his high school career is in decline and his energies are directed to the approaching cycle of higher education. It remains for the junior to make his mark, to gather the momentum that will establish him in the senior world next year. All eyes are thus on the junior: After all, who will be Valedictorian? Battalion Commander?

It is the junior who rides the crest; it is he who must find himself in the midst of the turbulence. The junior year is, in a sense, the moment of truth.

"OK—now what?"

The sophomore is already an "old cadet." He has survived his military basic, his academic baptism. He is wise (some say, TOO wise). A little either way of sixteen, his beard is recognizable in a strong light; his voice no longer wavers but remains in the limbo of adolescent nasality. He is possibly a corporal, or even a buck sergeant, and more than likely his verbal offerings carry overtones of a megalomania common to the newly arrived.

He has probably flunked at least one subject for one grading period and now knows the terrors of academic lapse; likewise, he has probably achieved the roll of honor on a similar occasion and has experienced the joys of academic success.

Having touched the poles, thus, he makes strong claim to cadet maturity.

Archbell Grubbs Jennette

Each fall they descend on the campus like a plague; weird mixtures each of boy scout and vandal. For a few it is the kindergarten trauma all over again; new faces, new surroundings, new fears; but for most it is another on the list of grand experiments — another "first" to be met with the same anticipation and excitement of the first date or the first time behind the wheel.

Of course, the freshman year is the faltering year; the "man" is quite literally "fresh." He is new to the system; the system is new to him — but as the year goes, the boy grows, and for many the transition from led to leader is unmistakeable.

By June the apprenticeship has been served. There are no longer any "new" cadets, only young ones. They are now journeymen; they are veterans. They have survived.

Football

nion, 12-0

"The question is," remarked somebody at the beginning of the season, "how can you get all these so-called superstars to play together. I mean, these boys are competing for college bids; how can you keep them from cutting each other's throat?"

The question seemed reasonable enough; after all, when two or three all-division, all-league or all-area stars compete for the same position there is bound to be fireworks. However, one thing the observer failed to consider: with kids, football is still a game and the concept of "teamwork" still has meaning. The fireworks were probably there, but when the starting lineup was named for the day, the "team" took over; individual competition was left on the practice field — at gametime it was one unit, THE BIG RED, and pity the other side!

By the end of the fourth game they were calling it the DREAM TEAM, and it shall be known forever thus in the annals of FMA sport. The answer, as New York Yankee fans have always known, is a strong bench. Depth, the Pros call it; having that good man in reserve against the time when your first choice fades or is injured, or simply needs a rest. The Cubs had depth. At every position there was a good man on the ready line; often it was a toss of the coin as to which was the better: the man on the field or the man on the bench. It didn't make a whole lot of difference, though; they all played. And how they played!

Somebody else said, "Well, with scores like that their schedule was probably a pushover." Well, the East Carolina College Freshmen were hardly Little League, and Fork Union was the scourge of the Military School League; and it is a well known fact that Columbia Prep is a farm team for the U. S. Naval Academy. No, it was not a soft schedule.

The scores are well known, but the real figures are in the statistics. Look at them; they appear on pages 122-23. The "stix" of the Frederick Military Academy Cubs of 1963 drew in clear detail a profile of a team that can only be called "great!"

As for the coaching — well, it is one thing to have talent to draw from, quite another to know what to do with it. The coaches stand on the record.

Frederick Academy: Wins and Salutes

By LARRY BONKO

PORTSMOUTH—At 6:15 sharp a bugle call cuts through the morning air and brings Frederick Military Academy to life. And what a life it is. Salutes, chow lines, formations and more salutes.

Not a single rah rah can be heard on this broad campus. Nowhere is there a touch of ivy. The athletic field has a lonely look about it and the football team waits to be discovered.

In between salutes and studies 38 football players have found time to win five straight games and score 107 points while limiting the other side to but three touchdowns.

The football players may have other thoughts about it but there is no better place for a young man. This is the belief of Emory Davis, the football coach who makes his way around campus in a smart officer's uniform.

Uniforms are everywhere here. The coach is not just the coach. He is the major.

"For an athlete this is not the best. An athlete is restricted. He is not a special character. Everyone must comply with the schedule and it is a tight schedule. The color you find at high schools is missing," pointed out Davis.

"But there is so much good here for an athlete or any boy that it offsets the other things. We have the boys 24 hours a day. He is on schedule. He eats well and sleeps as long as he should. The boys learn self discipline."

Davis neglected to say that there is an excellent course in football, too.

Davis' football players are a select group, excellent college prospects who come to Portsmouth from places like Kanapolis, N.C., West Wyoming, Pa. and Haden Heights, N.J.

Why are they at Frederick?

Davis was in his small office when that question came to him. Behind him a hundred white slips covered the wall. Davis pointed to the slips. "These [illegible] tacted last year. I guess I've written 500 letters. We have them broken down into tackles, guards and the rest. The boys come here usually for one of two reasons.

"First they want to pull up their college boards. A year at Frederick may be enough to do it. Then we have boys who need work on their grades. A year here, may be enough to help him."

A handful of colleges, some as large as North Carolina and as small as the College of the South, are grateful for Davis and Frederick. All too many high school athletes cannot meet academic requirements for college. At Frederick Academy he is shown the way.

Reveille is 6:15. The first class is 7:45. Then there is lunch. Then more classes. Meals are served in a chow hall. The lines are long. There is parade and complusory study. In a 16 hour day the student has exactly 40 minutes of free time. Tough life, indeed.

But five straight football victories are worth the salutes, the marching, the chow lines and the 6:15 reveille.

Midway through the second period Frederick took the ball on downs on its own 10-yard line. Marching down the field on the hard running of Harry Greene and Calvin Zongolowicz, the Cubs moved to the Fork Union 20 where quarterback Al Woodall flipped a 20-yard pass to end Henry McKay for the touchdown.

In seven games, the Cubs have allowed only 24 points.

Leading Frederick's defense, which held Fork Union to 23 yards rushing and 35 yards in the air, were former Maury High star John Sims and Danny Duncan. Sims had 12 tackles and Duncan eight.

cess of this Cub eleven that derick has scored 278 points nine games, an average of just under 31 a game, while yielding only 22. On the last two weekends, these young huskies in red and white have buried Benedictine, 53-0, and Hargrave Military, 64-0.

"I have never," Coach Emory Davis admits, "been associated with a team like this one. If I were choosing a team right now I don't see how I could do better. This group has perfect balance. They are outstanding on defense, and on attack we can throw the ball or run with power and with speed."

Davis, a 36-year-old father of four, had been a high school coach for 12 years before spending a year at William and Mary to work on his masters degree. This is his second year as football coach and athletic director, and in this time the school has taken great strides in this area. Not only is the varsity program booming but Davis has installed an intramural program for the entire school.

Some athletes here needed to bolster class standing, others to improve college board scores. All have study halls and special classes to prepare them for college.

COLLEGE MATERIAL

"We have at least two full teams of boys who can play college football on varying levels," Davis says.

Half a dozen players are here from Norfolk and Portsmouth schools.

"I've never been on a team like this one," says Jack Kennedy, former Cradock co-captain. "We have All-Staters sitting on the bench."

Kennedy, who hopes to attend the University of Arkansas, has boosted his average to an 89. The special study hall, he says, has made all the difference.

John Sims from Maury has hiked his academic average to 87, Calvin Zongolowicz of Norview is up to 81.

On the football field Frederick is most impressive, even in practice gear. Harry Greene, a fullback from Kannapolis, N.C., leads the team in scoring with 62 points. Ron Foresta has 48 and Zongolowicz 32. Greene has rushed for 657 yards, Foresta 603, and Zongo 517. Al Woodall, a giant quarterback, has completed 47 of 79 passes for 748 yards and six touchdowns. Kennedy leads the team in tackles with 67.

As a team, the Cubs have gained more than two miles on offense, 3,694 yards to be exact.

Cubs Nip Staunton For 10th Straight

PORTSMOUTH — Unbeaten Frederick Military Academy had its biggest scare of the season Saturday before it snatched a thrilling 14-7 victory from a strong Staunton Military Academy in the final 36 seconds of play.

With the Cubs trailing 7-6, halfback Calvin Zongolowicz took a screen pass from quarterback Al Woodall and raced 40 yards for the touchdown that brought the Cubs back from the brink of defeat. Woodall then passed to Mike Challoner for a two-point conversion that was anti-climatic.

The Statistics

Passing yardage	9	75

Frederick Mil.	6	0	0	8—14

FM—Zongolowicz 3 run (run failed)
SM—Sykes 3 run (Jones kick)
FM—Zongoolwicz 40 run (Woodal to Challoner)

The victory sent Frederick home with a perfect record of 10 straight wins.

TAKES LEAD

Staunton had taken the lead four minutes into the fourth period when quarterback Larry Sykes plunged three yards for a touchdown and Fred Jones kicked the extra point.

This score wiped out a 6-0 margin that Frederick had fashioned in the first period on a three-yard smash by Zongolowicz. A run for the extra point failed.

There were but 36 seconds left when the screen play on a third-and-eight situation, brought the Cubs the victory.

Frederick piled up 335 yards on the ground, but Staunton was tough when it counted. The Cubs also led in first downs, 13-9.

Frederick Tops Smith

PORTSMOUTH — Frederick Military Academy put four scorers in double figures Tuesday night and swamped Oscar Smith, 69-37, in the basketball opener for the losers. Last year Frederick won by one point on a last-second field goal by Donald Hundley. This time Hundley tallied 14 points to pace the Cubs.

Richard Neal and Al Woodall each had 13 points, Dennis Koslowski 11 for the Cubs who led, 6-5, after one period and 32-24 at the half. After intermission, Frederick pulled steadily away. Binky Inman led Smith with 14 points. Herman Perry added nine.

Don't forget to salute the flag, boys!

Twenty years from now, when you are showing this annual to your own children, Barry Goldwater will have become but a dim memory, and the Beatles merely lost among all the other fads of your adolescence. But that haircut—that will never, never be forgotten. And to think they stole it from Prince Valiant!

Beatlemania

We export Coca-Cola, jazz, slang, and westerns to the British Isles. The Beatles we get in return. Maybe lukewarm beer will be the next thing to catch on in the States.

The advent of Messrs. George Harrison, John Lennon, Paul McCartney, and Ringo Starr on these shores has been all that anyone could have hoped—or feared—the coming of The Beatles would be. Not since George Whitefield came over from England to touch off the Great Awakening in the Eighteenth Century have the natives been sent into such squealing transports of delight as Americans of a certain age and sex have been this week. Beatlemania, it seems, is an international phenomenom.

Back home, The Beatles have given a command performance and been presented to the members of Britain's Royal Family. Blase Paris was wowed when they crossed the Channel. America's teenagers, who have been nourished on nothing stronger than Fabian and milkshakes, had to be a pushover for the "Mersey sound."

But consideration of The Beatles as musicians may be beside the point. As MacLeish said A poem should not mean/But be, The Beatles do not have to sing, they are. Let just one Beatle get out of a taxicab, or enter a hotel lobby, and it is sufficient to start a quivering and trembling among the populace, the emotional St. Vitus dance that marks Beatle progress. The posh Plaza Hotel, where The Beatles padded out in New York, may never be the same. The Deauville, their Miami Beach billet, is preparing for The Beatles by hiring more policemen. The Beatles, Cassius Clay, Sonny Liston, and sunshine—what more could Miami Beach want?

The Republic has survived Davy Crockett, hula hoops, McCarthyism, the twist, and zoot suits. It lived through the ages of Rudy Vallee, Frank Sinatra, and Elvis what's-his-name and, we trust, it will survive The Beatles too. But if that ragmop hair style becomes the tonsorial vogue, we don't know that the barbers of the nation will make it through the year.

'At This Point, It's Worth a Try'

Profiles Lt. Col. Robert C. Plaine

LIEUTENANT COLONEL ROBERT C. PLAINE

The biography, brief or long, of any professional soldier must necessarily read like a railroad timetable. Years are used instead of hours, and army camps instead of towns, but the overall effect is much the same: "Arr Camp X 4 Jun 40, dpt 16 Oct 42; Arr Fort Y 2 Nov 42, dpt 1 Jan 43, etc., etc." And so it has been for Lieutenant Colonel Robert Plaine.

The first stop on the Plaine timetable was the National Guard Armory at Norristown, Pa. The outfit was the 111th Infantry; the year 1928. The recruit was only 16, but Guard units were then as they are now; one evening a week, or perhaps Saturday, and camp in the summer with the regulars; no problem for a high school boy.

It is likely that most of the cadre of the 111th were A.E.F. men, and that their tales of Chateau-Thierry, The Argonne, and Belleau Wood had some effect on the young private. In any event, not long after high school, Robert Plaine exchanged his N.G. serial number for an R.A. and found himself a career.

Early in his first enlistment Private Plaine took the first of many rides in an army transport; destination; Schofield Barracks, Hawaii and duty with the 21st Infantry. In 1935, about the time he sewed on his first hashmark, he was ordered to Fort Meade, in Maryland, where he ran into a pair of veteran buck sergeants whose paths he would cross again many years and many tours later. You guessed it: Henry H. Church and Floyd H. West. It wasn't a very big army in those days.

With peacetime draft of 1940-41 the regulars became the nucleus of an army destined to expand many times over, and so the promotions began to open up. The roster of the 93rd Antitank Battalion at Meade included the name of T/Sgt. Robert Plaine in those days. However, when the United States finally entered the war, the expansion was begun in earnest, and the army found itself critically short of experienced officers. Selected for Officer Candidate School, Sergeant Plaine was ordered to the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga. early in 1942. Commissioned in June of that year, he was detached to the Quartermaster Corps to help organize a truck regiment at Camp Knight, Oakland, California.

Plaine stayed with that regiment throughout the war, commanding a training company, later as S-4, and ultimately as Regimental Executive Officer, with the rank of Major. During this tour he saw action in the North Burma and Burma-India campaigns, serving under General Joseph "Vinegar Joe" Stilwell.

The war over, Major Plaine settled down to the routine assignments that invariably come with peacetime duty. Two years at Philadelphia must have seemed nice after the rice paddies of China, but the Pentagon seems to have a "thing" about soldiers staying very long in one place, or for that matter one climate. Major Plaine suddenly found himself in Alaska.

The Alaskan duty was different, however. In 1947 the Army Air Force was about to become a separate arm of the national military establishment, and Plaine was assigned to help in the transition. Instead of a Battalion, however, he was given command of a Squadron (Do not color his uniform blue, however; he was just on loan to the Air Force).

In 1950 Major Plaine left the tundra for civilization and Fort Lee, Va., where he trained ROTC cadets in summer camp and conducted marksmanship instructions for the regulars. The same year he was posted to Columbus, Ohio as Executive Officer of the General Depot there. Early in the Columbus tour he was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel and selected for advanced training at the Army Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

During the Columbus tour Colonel Plaine found himself busy expediting material for the war in Korea. Ultimately he followed that material himself, being posted to Korea with the 8th Army. In 1954 he returned, doffed his garrison hat and retired.

However, as we all know, the last step on the timetable is not always the end of the trip. There is sometimes quite a way to go after getting off the train. Colonel Plaine disembarked in 1954, took a walk around the park, had lunch, read a paper, and suddenly it was 1959, and a new military school had just opened and needed a man.

That was five years ago, and as far as Colonel Plaine is concerned, this leg of the trip has just begun.

Major Floyd H. West

MAJOR FLOYD H. WEST

Major West's timetable starts a little earlier than Colonel Plaine's; he's been on the road a little longer.

Just after graduation from the high school at Benson, North Carolina, Floyd West signed up as a regular army man (a recruiting sergeant must have been lunking in the shadows at Commencement). His first post was Fort Eustis, Va., his outfit, the Infantry. (Do you wonder, gentlemen, why Colonel Plaine and Major West have so little sympathy when you complain about marching. Now, back in the old Infantry . . .) In those days a man could re-enlist and expect to stay put for awhile, so Floyd West stayed put for seven years before the regiment itself was moved. Another factor in those years, not true today, was that a man earned his rank in an outfit but when he left the rank stayed; thus voluntary transfers were not common. Floyd West had promoted through the grades from Private to Sergeant Major while still in the same Regiment.

In 1940, with the buildup resulting from the Draft, Sergeant West transferred to the Armored Forces, moving to Fort Bragg, N. C., for combat training two years later. His was one of the first units to see action in the European Theater, landing at Casa Blanca, French Morocco in 1942. That was the beginning of the famous North African campaign that resulted in the defeat of the armies led by the "Desert Fox," the German Field Marshal, Rommel. Sergeant West's North African timetable reads like the Mediterranean Special: Rabat, Oran, Algiers, Kasserine Pass and Tunis.

In May 1943 M/Sgt Floyd H. West was awarded a field commission as First Lieutenant and transferred to the 5th Army. Sometime later he commanded a Military Police Company and performed as Assistant Provost Marshal at 6th Army Corps. That relatively peacefull duty lasted only four months, however, because Captain West was on the beach at Salerno by September. Although the Italians had surrendered, the Germans were considerably more stubborn and German armies were entrenched all along the Italian coast. For Captain West that meant another landing, Anzio, January, 1944.

While the Allies were planning their famous assault on the European mianland from Britain, many of the tired veterans of the Mediterranean campaigns were rotated home, among them Captain West, who assumed command of an M. P. company at Camp Butner, N. C.

Peacetime duty included another tour at Fort Meade, where he served as Battalion Executive Officer and later, in 1949, as Battalion Commander, with the rank of Major. However, Major West, as Colonel Plaine and every other soldier sooner or later learned to expect, has been in "one climate" too long. Next followed duty in the Philippines and Okinawa before another stateside assignment was offered.

In 1953 Major West was assigned to the Southern California Military District at San Pedro, with succeeding duty at Camp Cooke and 6th Army Headquarters, from which he retired the following year. During one of those he purchased land and a home in the Napa Valley, where he and Mrs. West now spend their summers.

Following retirement from the army, Major West spent three years with a bank in San Francisco. Later he attended Arizona State University near Phoenix, where he subsequently went into business for himself.

However, early in 1960 an old army friend asked for help in operating the military program of a new school back east. Having served alongside Henry Church for most of his early career, and never having lost contact with him through the years, the idea sounded appealing. Thus, by fall 1960, the military office of Frederick Academy looked a little like a scene from a Fort Meade P. X. of 25 years before; only the belt sizes were different, the hair a little thinner or a little grayer.

Touring the United States

Director

Manager

The cadets were thus treated to an awesome display of primitive gymnastics by the men of the Ollerup Academy, not to mention exercises in poise and balance by the ladies. The intramural period that day saw numerous brave if futile attempts at emulation, together with the resultant (and not unexpected) strains and bruises. The younger faculty, marched in age by the Danish performers, could only hide behind their own happiness.

OLLERUP GYM TEACHERS

GREETINGS:

By Arne Mortensen

GREETINGS FROM DENMARK — From our school to your school — Only a few months ago we performed among the ruins of the ancient center of physical culture, historically known as Hellas — Greece. Between ancient Hellas and contemporary United States lie 25 centuries of Humanity's struggle for freedom and democracy — but till this day we accept the classic example of the Greeks as our prototype. To us young Europeans the United States is Democracy's tower of strength, and its source of growth. To us — and to you — the preservation of democracy depends upon individual vigilance, individual responsibility. To be vigilant one must be physically fit. We are here to show you our ways of attaining physical fitness. Our ideas about a sound mind in a sound body is to develop and equip the individual to the limits of his potential, physically, mentally and morally. When we go touring the world, it is not only because we wish to uphold the tradition established by the founder of our school, it is also because of our faith in Democracy, and our desire to make the virtues and values of physical education known and available to the youth of all nations.

Once again: Greetings from Denmark!
— And from ancient Hellas!
We salute the United States!

Mrs. Conway provided daily breakfast for the troup during the week they were in Portsmouth. The unacustomed presence of shapely blondes in the dining hall disrupted the usually orderly routine of military mess.
